

THE MILAN BICOCCA UNIVERSITY STARTING THE INTERNATIONAL DOCTORATE FOR SUSTAINABLE HUMAN DEVELOPMENT

The International Doctorate in Sustainable Human Development, coordinated by the University of Milan Bicocca, has started its activities with a Sustainable Development Week in Milan.

The inaugural session, held on February 27th, 2018, after the greetings of the Rector, Cristina Mesa and other authorities, was opened by the introductory speeches of Manuel Valle Fasco, Director of the Ministry of Education of Cuba, Aldo Dell'Araccia, former Ambassador of the European Union, Luciano Carrino, president of the KIP International School, Milton J. Bennet, University of Portland in USA, Mariella Pandolfi, University of Montreal in Canada and Alfredo Melo, University of Turin in Italy.

The Doctorate is held in partnership with the University José Martí Perez of Sancti Spiritus in Cuba, the Universidad Nacional Autónoma of Nicaragua, the National University Arturo Jauretche of Buenos Aires and the National University Piura in Peru. The KIP International School has collaborated in the design of the Doctorate and will support all its activities that will take place not only in the classroom but also through links with many experiences of participatory territorial development that seek to apply the indications of the Agenda 2030. The Doctorate is one of the initiatives that the KIP School intends to link to several others in the context of its commitment to building an international system of training initiatives for development professionals who intend to work in line with the 2030 Agenda.

To know more

Sustainable Development Week - Esp

Sustainable Development Week - It

Milan Bicocca University website